内容	I attended and gave an oral presentation at the 17th International Symposium on Microbial Ecology organized by the International Society for Microbial Ecology. The International Symposia on Microbial Ecology are the world's largest non-profit meetings in the field of microbial ecology. The symposia typically attract over 2000 delegates who together represent over 50 countries. In my presentation, I received a lot of advice. Some of them were very helpful for my research. In addition, during the one week I stayed in the symposium, I listened to many reports from the world's best groups in my research area and communicated with many good researchers. Their work inspired me a lot. I believe the participation of this symposium will benefit my future work a lot.
