

Overseas Crisis Management Course

The overseas crisis management course is a training session to avoid "safety risks" for those who go abroad for study or research at overseas educational institutions and/or other organizations.

Please subscribe this specific course via online from the link below.

Visiting overseas is now essential for people to obtain global perspective, and studying abroad shall even strengthen such perspective. We are eager to encourage you to have these valuable experiences.

However, when you visit and stay outside your mother country or Japan, you should be aware of various types of safety risks. It is strongly advised that you learn those risk to avoid potential dangers as much as possible while you are in another country.

By partnering with Emergency Assistance Japan Co., Ltd., The University of Tokyo offers an overseas crisis management course via online.

It is mandatory for the students planning to study abroad to subscribe this course. Students who have an interest in studying abroad but do not have immediate plans to do so are also advised to participate in this online course.
